

You made me think what kind of question is this?

What's My Why in Life?

Thank you for taking the time to reflect on this message. What follows comes from the heart, and it touches on some of life's most profound and eternal questions:

“Why am I here?”

“What is my purpose?”

“What happens after this life?”

These aren't just religious or philosophical questions — they're human questions.

Whether you're wrestling with truth, identity, eternity, conscience, or free will — whether you come from a spiritual background or none at all — if you've ever paused to ask, “What's my why in life?”, then you've already begun searching for something deeper.

Maybe the things you've been chasing — success, materialism, comfort, or distraction — still leave you feeling hollow. If so, you're not alone. That hollow space wasn't meant to be filled by the world. Maybe it was meant to be filled by what should have been there all along.

What you're about to read is an invitation to explore your “why” — to consider the possibility that your life was created with meaning, and that you were made for something more.

Ever wonder why you're here? Of course you do. We all do at some point. The search for purpose is written into our nature.

Animals, too, experience emotion and show signs of awareness — some would say they wonder in their own way. While they don't speak in words, they were designed with instincts to survive, to interact, and to serve a purpose in the world. From food to friendship, they keep creation in motion — generation after generation — unaware of time or purpose beyond instinct.

But humans are different. We argue, we create, we dream, we ask the big questions:

“Why am I here?”

“What is my purpose?”

“What's my why?”

Here's the truth: whether you realize it or not, you've already chosen a why.

You're making choices every day — and that's because you have something no other creature has: free will. You were created with it.

Say it out loud if you have to:

“My life is based on the choices I've made. I have the free will to live as I choose.”

And the moment you say this — the moment you realize this — you acknowledge something sacred:

You have a conscience.

That voice inside you? The one that tells you when something's right or wrong? That's not random. That's not evolution.

That's evidence of your Creator.

The Reality We Try to Ignore

Some people might read this and think, “Here we go again... another person talking about God.” But ask yourself this:

How can something made of flesh — able to feel, think, love, and cry — truly believe in nothing?

Nothing means just that — nothing.

No love. No purpose. No reason. No origin. No future.

And yet, you can see. You can taste. You can hurt. You can dream.

You can write. You can read these very words.

We are the only species on this earth who can do that.

You were made for more.

The Voice of God

God speaks — not always in words, but often through emotion.

He reaches us in joy, in pain, in peace, in guilt.

He gave you a conscience not to control you, but to guide you.

He won't force Himself on you — because that's not love.

He invites you, but the door must be opened by your own hand.

“Behold, I stand at the door and knock.
If anyone hears My voice and opens the door,
I will come in to him and dine with him, and he with Me.”
— Revelation 3:20

Why doesn't He just kick the door open and save you?

Because He gave you free will. And He will never violate it.

What the World Offers Isn't Enough

The world tells us to chase everything but God — fame, money, pleasure, status.

But none of it lasts. None of it satisfies the soul.

The ancient idol Ba'al couldn't answer humanity's deepest questions:

- Where did I come from?
- Why am I here?
- Where am I going?

Neither can modern idols — materialism, self-worship, celebrity culture, or political power.

You were made for God. You were made in His image.

You were made for fellowship with Him.

And until you return to Him, you'll search a thousand different directions — and come up empty.

The Gospel — The Greatest Love Story

“For God so loved the world that He gave His one and only Son, that whoever believes in Him shall not perish but have eternal life.”
— John 3:16

The Gospel is this:

Jesus left heaven, put on flesh, and lived a perfect life.

He died willingly on the cross to take the weight of your sin.

He was buried, and on the third day, He rose again — defeating death, hell, and the grave.

Why?

So that you could live — really live.

Not just someday in heaven, but now — with the Holy Spirit living inside you, guiding your conscience, giving you strength, helping you walk in truth and love.

Your Life Is a Vapor — So Live Now

Life is short. It's a vapor.

No one is promised tomorrow.

Time is the one thing you can't get back.

Realize this:

The present is a gift.

That's why it's called "the present."

Soon, today will become the past.

And tomorrow? It's not guaranteed.

And one day, sooner than you think, no one who knew your name will still be alive.

Even the people whose opinions held you back... they'll be gone too.

So why live to please a world that's passing away?

You Have a Choice

God isn't just a Creator — He is spirit, and those who worship Him must do so in spirit and in truth.

He gives each of us a will — and we choose where to place our time, our allegiance, and our devotion.

But most people don't realize who or what they're giving those things to.

We make idols out of celebrities, tech, money, and pleasure.

We call evil good and good evil.

We watch murder, lust, betrayal, and pride — and call it entertainment.

All the while, the world feeds our emotions and shapes our conscience until we're numb to what's real.

This is how Satan works — not always with violence, but with distraction.

But There Is Hope

If you've ever felt like nothing, like dirt, like a mistake — know this:

That's a lie.

That's how Satan wants you to feel.

Even Jesus felt that kind of rejection on the cross — but He stayed there.

He could've come down...

But He loves you too much.

If He came down from that cross, there would be no salvation.

So He stayed.

For you.

So What's Your Why?

Your "why" isn't just a question — it's a decision.

You were made to know God.

To walk with Him.

To forgive and be forgiven.

To live a life that echoes in eternity.

There will be a judgment day.

Not based on how good you were.

But on whether you accepted the gift that was offered to you.

So ask yourself:

What's my why in life?

Have I accepted Jesus?

Do I know where I'm going when this life ends?

Do I live like time is short and eternity is real?

If not... now is the time. Do it now right where you are standing sitting lay in this life you have left.

Your “Why” in Life

You were created by God, in His image, with a conscience, a soul, and the free will to choose your path. You were made for fellowship with God — to walk with Him, love Him, and allow Him to shape your life from the inside out.

Your “why” is to know God, be transformed by His love, and live your short life on earth with purpose — not for things, but for truth, for grace, and for eternity.

You understand that nothing this world offers — no idol, addiction, or achievement — can satisfy the human soul like Jesus can.

You know your conscience isn't random — it's God's whisper. And the moment you choose to open the door to Him, He enters — not by force, but by invitation.

And so your “why” is not just about what you do — but who you walk with. It's to live free by forgiving, to find peace in surrender, and to help others ask the same question: “What's my why?”
